DAN SMOOT

THE CFR'S DOMESTIC POLICY

Big business, under the influence of the Council on Foreign Relations, has become a powerful lobby for unconstitutional government programs which are transforming our free-enterprise system into socialism. For example, officials of such giant firms as Burroughs Corporation, General Electric, Hotel Corporation of America, IBM, Litton Industries, Packard Bell Electronics, RCA, U.S. Industries, Westinghouse, Xerox are among the foremost propagandists for the Job Corps,[1] which is not only unconstitutional (since the Constitution grants the federal government no authority to finance such activity), but is also wasteful and ineffective.

Why? Officials of practically all these firms are members of one or more organizations involved in the powerful interlock of which the Council on Foreign Relations is the center; and all these firms operate job corps training camps under profitable government contracts.[1]

Business has been a powerful lobby for federal urban renewal, an unconstitutional program which has trampled on private property rights and has opened rich veins of public money for graft, corruption, and political vote buying. Though initially authorized by the National Housing Act of 1949, federally financed urban renewal did not become a vigorously promoted nationwide program until late 1957, after the Committee for Economic Development launched an all-out program to support it.[2] The Committee for Economic Development, an interlocking affiliate of the Council on Foreign Relations, is composed largely of officials of big corporations.

The demonstration cities, or model cities, program is an outgrowth and magnification of urban renewal. The model cities program, patently unconstitutional, is a monstrous step toward communization of the United States, because—if funded and expanded as planned—it will eventuate in government confiscation of all urban, suburban, and adjacent land areas in the United States.[3]

In 1966, when it seemed apparent that Congress would reject the model cities program, 22 leading businessmen were hastily organized into a committee to support it. Among them were Henry Ford II of Ford Motor, Thomas Gates of Morgan Guaranty Trust, Alfred Perlman of New York Central Railroad, R. Gwin Follis of Standard Oil of California, David Rockefeller of Chase Manhattan Bank.[1]

THE DAN SMOOT REPORT is published weekly by The Dan Smoot Report, Inc., Box 9538, Dallas, Texas 75214 (office at 6441 Gaston Ave.). Subscriptions: $18.00 for 2 years; $10.00, 1 year; $6.00, 6 months; first class, $12.50 a year; airmail, $14.50. Dan Smoot was born in Missouri, reared in Texas. With BA and MA degrees from SMU (1938 and 1940), he joined the Harvard faculty (1941) as a Teaching Fellow, doing graduate work in American civilization. From 1942 to 1951, he was an FBI agent; from 1951 to 1955, a commentator on national radio and television. In 1955, he started his present independent, free-enterprise business: publishing this REPORT and abbreviating it each week for radio and TV broadcasts available for commercial sponsorship by business firms.

Follis, Gates, and Rockefeller are members of the Council on Foreign Relations. Ford and most of the others involved are members of one or more organizations—such as the Business Council—interlocked with the CFR. Ford Motor Company and Chase Manhattan Bank are known to be financial contributors to the CFR.[2]

In April, 1967, government officials had a secret meeting with representatives of major drug companies, urging the druggists to send medicinals to red China to help communist leaders combat famine and disease. The businessmen were told that embargoes against medicinals to red China would be lifted quietly, because the administration does not want to face public wrath about helping the Chinese communists.[4]

A White House spokesman says:

"Business is what's going to save us. Business leaders won't be able to change really conservative Senators and Congressmen, but they surely can have impact on some of the more moderate Republicans and Democrats who might not be for us otherwise."[1]

An executive of the Department of Housing and Urban Development says:

"Each agency has gradually developed a list of firms interested in its field. The Treasury Department, for example, has a blue-ribbon list of businessmen who supported the President's tax policies. We don't keep them turned on all the time, but we know how to turn them on to write letters or make phone calls or testify when necessary—for our own programs or for programs of other agencies."[1]

The promotion of self-interest does not fully explain why many big businesses have become propaganda adjuncts of big government.

Many managers of our largest corporations are not men who built, or own, the companies they manage. Academically trained, many go directly from government service, university faculties, or tax-exempt foundations into managerial positions in business. By education and experience, they are socialists (though, of course, they do not call themselves that, preferring such labels as "liberal," "moderate," "progressive").

Robert S. McNamara is typical of the new type of corporate executive. He went directly from an assistant Harvard professorship to government service, and from there to a high position in the Ford Motor Company. From Ford, McNamara moved into the Kennedy administration as Secretary of Defense.

McNamara's mismanagement of American defense, already disastrous to our country, could eventually be the cause of our utter destruction. Yet, McNamara is one of a triumvirate (the other two being Secretary of State Dean Rusk and presidential adviser Walt W. Rostow, both CFR members) who help Johnson make all major decisions —in secrecy from Congress and the public, ignoring or excluding advice from experienced military professionals.[5]

When enough Americans are sufficiently informed, we can alter the collision course with disaster which the CFR has set for our country. Toward that end, I recommend wider distribution of The Invisible Government, which costs $1.00 for single copies, much less for quantity orders.

The official roster of CFR resident members, as of September 1, 1966, was published in this Report last week. Below is the September 1, 1966, roster of non-resident CFR members.
